Rural Women's Micro-Savings and Access to Clean Water, Kenya:
PFP's largest program is in Kenya where PFP supports the formation of rural women's groups, helping local leaders to equip members through training and matching grants so they can undertake projects that tackle the most pressing needs of their families and communities.
In FY2019, these projects focused on access to clean, safe water and sustainable energy, income generation and group micro-savings. PFP grants for 86 rainwater-harvesting systems, combined with 96 rain-harvesting systems funded by the Kenya groups' income generation and micro-savings projects, brought clean, safe water to 182 new families (over 1460 additional children and adults.) In FY 2019, PFP sent one team of US women to work alongside the members of 5 different women's groups in eastern Kenya, building the concrete bases for 15 rain-harvesting systems and fostering friendship, education and support for the women's groups, their families, and their communities.

In addition, through customized sessions pertaining to the requests and needs of the Kenyan Regional Managers, PFP staff and support provide yearly training to enhance their local, group and personal leadership skills, which in turn they share with their group members. No revenue is derived from this program. This year, as part of the work team, a US pediatrician provided basic health training to over 150 women who were bused from outlying areas to the work-team location. As many women as could come
